Kim Il Sung who led the Fatherland Liberation War to victory

Iron-willed Brilliant Commander

The great victory the Korean people achieved in the Fatherland Liberation War (1950-1953), which could be called a confrontation between a rifle and an atomic bomb, is ascribable to the Juche-oriented military ideas, art of command and adroit strategies and tactics of Comrade Kim Il Sung, ever-victorious and iron-willed commander.

On July 27, 1953, 72 years ago, the Korean people defeated the US imperialists in the Fatherland Liberation War (1950-1953) and honourably safeguarded the dignity and sovereignty of their country.

It was a military miracle unprecedented in the history of human warfare that the young Democratic People's Republic of Korea, less than two years old, inflicted an ignominious defeat on the United States that had been boasting of being the "strongest" in the world.

The great victory the Korean people achieved in the war, which could be called a confrontation between a rifle and an atomic bomb, is ascribable to the Juche-oriented military ideas, strategies and tactics and outstanding art of command of President Kim Il Sung.

Kim Il Sung frustrated the military and technical edge of the United States on the strength of the spiritual and moral supremacy of all the Korean people.

He created the original military idea that what plays a decisive role in war is not the weapons or other combat equipment but the man who handles them, and roused all the people to the fight for defending the sovereignty of the country and nation.

He ensured that political work was intensified so as to ensure that all soldiers were filled with confidence in the validity of their cause and victory in the war.

In the radio address to all the Korean people on June 26, 1950 to cope with the surprise aggression war unleashed by the US imperialists, Kim Il Sung set forth militant tasks for winning victory in the war.

June 25, The US imperialists unleashed an aggression war against the DPRK.

Under the leadership of Supreme Commander Kim Il Sung, the soldiers prepared themselves to be fighters strong in faith and performed heroic feats in all battles. A large number of soldiers sacrificed themselves for their one and only country: The artillerymen of a coastal battery armed with only four artillery pieces delayed the landing of 50 000 enemy troops for three days; the sailors sank the enemy's heavy cruiser with four torpedo boats; some soldiers blocked the enemy's pillboxes with their chests to ensure the advance of their units; and a woman soldier crawled under an enemy tank with a bundle of grenades in her hands.

Kim Il Sung ensured that the KPA took the initiative in the war with adroit strategy and tactics and dealt a decisive blow to the enemy.

He turned the unfavourable war situations into favourable ones by employing outstanding strategy and tactics, like prompt counterattack to beat back the enemy's surprise invasion, formation of a second front with regular army units, intensifying attacks on the enemy from behind, new-type counterattack warfare, tunnel warfare, a sniper's movement, movements of aircraft-hunting teams and tank hunters' teams, and assaulting actions.

The United States hurled two million troops and large amounts of military hardware into the Korean front, but suffered a great loss, nearly 2.3 times greater than that in the days of the Pacific War. It could not but kneel down before the Korean people, which meant the first defeat in its aggressive wars numbering over 110.

The war clearly proved that the United States is never the strongest in the world and the army led by an iron-willed brilliant commander can defeat any aggressors equipped even with atomic bombs.

The followings are what the US ruling circles said:

The myth has been exploded. We were not as strong a nation as others thought us to be.

What is very clear is that the United States was undoubtedly

The KPA soldiers, who turned out in the fight for defending their country with a burning hatred against the aggressors, repulsed the US imperialists and defended their country at the cost of blood.

The Korean people safeguarded their country in this three-year, do-or-die war, and their country became widely known as a heroic nation, a miraculous nation, that prevented the outbreak of a new world war.

WARTIME POSTERS

During the Fatherland Liberation War (1950-1953), decisive of the destiny of their country, the Korean people defended their country with honour.

Among them were painters like Jong Kwan Chol and Rim Hong Un. When the war broke out, they drew posters that could inspire all the people to strive to defeat the US aggressors and defend their country.

Just three days after the start of the war, they created the poster All Out to the Front for the Country! which greatly encouraged the people to turn out in the sacred war.

Many other posters they produced could be seen on the front and in the rear including the streets and villages in the liberated areas.

Even in the period of the strategic temporary retreat in the autumn of 1950, the painters continued to turn out posters.

In small dugouts, where they could hardly turn their bodies, they drew posters by the lamplight, making pigments by their own efforts. Many difficulties and ordeals faced them, but they were convinced that the Korean people would surely emerge victorious in the war.

The posters they created instilled confidence in and optimism for victory into the minds of the people.

More than 70 years have passed since the V-day, but the feats the painters performed to inspire the people to win the war are told generation after generation.
